INTRODUCTION.

THE following list comprises the records of those departments which are now represented by the Board of Admiralty. The only omissions are :

- (1) Ships' books, including log books, medical journals, muster books, pay books, and victualling lists.
- (2) Similar records relating to dockyards.
- (3) Deeds relating to the estates of Greenwich Hospital.

It is proposed to publish a list of ships' books in a separate volume at some future time.

The records of each department have as a rule been classified as follows :—

- (1) In-letters—original letters received by the department, now preserved in bundles or bound into volumes.
- (2) Out-letters—drafts or copies of letters despatched by the department.
- (3) Accounts.
- (4) Minutes.
- (5) Registers, &c.—an artificial class comprising in general all volumes and papers of the nature of lists of names.
- (6) Miscellanea.

Occasionally when a set of records has been thought too large or important to be put among miscellanea it has been allowed to remain as an additional class. Such are the patents and indexes in the Secretary's department.

A table of contents and an index of subjects have been added, and it is hoped that in most cases the searcher will find these sufficient a guide to the contents of this volume.

The Secretary's Department in the following arrangement represents the Lord High Admiral, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty and their Secretary, and the records under this head include all matters coming under the direct cognisance of the Lords of the Admiralty.

After 1762, and much more fully after 1792, an abstract was prepared every year of the Secretary's In-letters. This was known as the "Digest," and was annually supplemented after 1792 by an "Index" of names of persons and ships with references to the Digest. These Indexes and Digests when properly understood and used are a valuable guide to the enquirer. In order to save space in compiling the Digest, a list of subjects was prepared and an index-number was given to each important subject, which was in its turn broken up into sub-divisions represented by sub-numbers. The numbers and sub-numbers are set in the edge of the volume of Digest in the same way as the letters of the alphabet are set in the edge of an ordinary address book: but are so arranged that only the principal numbers are in sight when the book is opened at the first page, the sub-numbers subordinate to any number only coming into sight when the volume is opened at that number.

A key to this numerical arrangement is pasted into the flyleaf of each year's Digest. It is also printed separately as a thin quarto volume.

Index a References to documents given in the Digest are generally easy to interpret, although much abbreviated. To save space however the names of Naval Stations are represented by single letters according to an arbitrary list (see below) so that a reference to an admiral's letter or despatch will always appear as a single letter followed by a number—thus E. 47 will stand for Port Admiral's letter—Downs—No. 47, and the number of the volume of In-letters containing it can be found at once on p. 8 of this list.

Index a List of Naval Ports and Stations with the references to them as given in the Digest: ^[a]

For dates before 1763 it should be remembered that Out-letters are in most cases indexed volumes, and therefore more easily searched than In-letters.

The records of the Accountant-General's department include those of the Treasurer of the Navy, whose office, abolished in 1836, is represented to some extent by that of the Accountant-General.

The Navy Board, Navy (not Admiralty) Commissioners, or Principal Officers of the Navy were generally responsible for the state of the ship and the navigating part of her crew. Information concerning ship-building, repairs, dockyards, masters, carpenters (but not gunners or boatswains, who were fighting officers), and seamen generally may be looked for in the Navy Board Records. The Navy Board was absorbed into the Admiralty in 1832.

The records listed here under the general heading of Medical Department include those of the Sick and Hurt Board and other abolished departments by which the medical business of the Navy was at different times administered. Among them will be found a considerable amount of matter relating to prisoners of war. Although the supervision of the latter was shared by several departments at different times, it has been thought more convenient to collect the whole of the records relating thereto under one heading.

The most usual object of a search in the Admiralty records is to trace the services of an officer or seaman.

The services of an ordinary seaman can never be traced unless the name of a ship on which he has served be known. Then the muster book or pay book of this ship will usually give the names of the ships from which he came and to which he proceeded respectively, and thus by going backwards and forwards his whole service may probably be followed.

In the case of a warrant officer: if he was serving after 1780, his name may be found in some of the indexes and compilations listed on p. 88, or it may appear in the Admiralty Index (see pp. 89-94 of this list). If he served before 1780, a tedious search through the commission and warrant books (p. 81) is generally necessary.

The services of a midshipman before he passed as a lieutenant are stated in his passing certificate (pp. 82 and 165). The Navy Board passing certificates (p. 165) after 1794^[a] have in most cases birth certificates annexed, and should generally be consulted in preference to those of the Secretary's Office (p. 82).

[a] Baptismal certificates are in many cases annexed from the year 1789 onwards.

From the time of his passing until he obtained his commission as lieutenant, the midshipman was frequently rated as warrant officer, or even as able seaman, and this period of his career is often difficult to trace. From the time of his promotion, his service should appear in the full pay ledgers (p. 119) if he served after 1795. If he served before 1795, it is generally the simplest plan to make a systematic search through the half pay lists (pp. 122-124) which give the names of the ships from which he came and to which he went. When his name appears in one of these volumes with a blank space against it, the meaning is that an earlier and a later volume must be searched, as he was on half pay during the whole period covered by the volume under inspection. Generally this method will, in conjunction with the ships' Muster Books or the List Books (pp. 86-7), give the officer's whole service. In addition to the above, it should be noted that there are two general returns, one of all officers alive in 1817-22, and the other of officers alive in 1846; these give complete records of service of all officers included. The compilations referred to on page 88 of this list may also be consulted with advantage.

An officer's marriage certificate may be found among the papers sent in by his widow in her application for a pension in cases where such application was made (pp. 84-5, 184).

After 1836, officers on half pay were paid by the Paymaster-General, among whose records later half pay registers will be found.

Books and documents subsequent to the year 1885, although included in this List, are not open to public inspection. A special permit from the Admiralty is also required for the production of a few records of earlier date.

This List has been compiled by Mr. H. Rodney and Mr. A. E. Stamp of this Office.

The first two (Feb.-Sept., 1689 and Sept. 1689 to Aug. 1690) contain copies and summaries respectively of proceedings in Council; a large part of these will be found in Vol. 5247. The third part (Nov. 1692 - Dec. 1698) contains reports of proceedings at joint meetings of the Privy Council and the Board of Admiralty. Vol. 5249 duplicates much that is contained in 5248 but also gives some fresh information.

[Note: These indexes give under the name of the Warrant Officer or Seaman the reference to the volume and page on which his certificate of service is entered. Series I gives references mainly to Vols. 1-74 (1802-1867), but contains a few occasional ones to the later (miscellaneous) volumes. Series II continues for the most part the references from Vol. 74 (1868) onwards, but contains many occasional ones to earlier volumes. In both Series I & II the numbers preceded by C.S., and sometimes followed by A or B are references to the class of Continuous Service Engagements, Adm.139.]
